What's New In AutoCAD?

You can import 3D models into your drawings, markups, and text labels using the new standard Microsoft Exchange ME SDK. Markup Assist detects geometric features in your drawings (such as arcs, circles, lines, and polygons) and lets you adjust their sizes, positions, and orientations in the drawing. You can view a live view of a 3D model, as well as an image of the 3D model's keypoints. (video: 6:05 min.) You can send designs to the Google Cloud Print service to print and share designs. (video: 5:00 min.) Automatic Materials Labels: Use the new material picker to specify the properties of materials, such as color, pattern, and finish. Select and combine a variety of material types for use in your designs. You can draw or import layers, apply materials to them, and then reuse those layers in your drawings. You can create and edit a 2D material as a sheet, or modify its appearance in the 3D model. (video: 5:08 min.) The Insert Options dialog box includes an Export/Import material preview option. Insert Options (video: 4:50 min.) The selection handles on the new materials picker are sized to match the existing material picker handles. Added support for Adobe PostScript, EPS, and PDF formats for BMP and TIFF image data. You can use the New AutoCAD Material Editor to create new materials and manipulate existing ones. (video: 4:00 min.) The selection handles on the New AutoCAD Material Editor match the position and size of the existing material picker handles. You can also use the New AutoCAD Material Editor to create new materials with predefined materials. Use the new selection handles to create, edit, delete, and move materials. Now you can choose a material with no image data. (video: 1:50 min.) The Materials view in the Properties palette includes a preview for the selected material in the drawing. Now you can switch to a large preview of a selection of materials in a drawing. (video: 1:00 min.) The Properties palette includes a preview for the selected material. Improved compatibility with third-party
